BP BEGINS PUMPING MUD INTO OIL WELL IN LATEST ATTEMPT TO PLUG GUSHER

Associated Press

COVINGTON, La. BP started pumping heavy mud into the leaking Gulf of Mexico well Wednesday and said everything was going as planned in the company's boldest attempt yet to plug the gusher that has spewed millions of gallons of oil during the past five weeks.

BP hoped the mud could overpower the steady stream of oil, but chief executive Tony Hayward said it would be at least 24 hours before officials know whether the attempt has been successful. The company eventually wants to inject cement into the well.

"I'm sure many of you have been watching the plume," Hayward said from Houston. "All I can say is it is unlikely to give us any real indication of what is going on. Either increases or decreases are not an indicator of either success or failure at this time."

The stakes are high. Fishermen, hotel and restaurant owners, politicians and residents along the coast are fed up with BP's so far ineffective attempts to stop the oil leak that sprang after an offshore drilling rig exploded April 20. Eleven workers were killed, and by the most conservative estimate, 7 million gallons of crude have spilled into the Gulf, fouling Louisiana's marshes and coating birds and other wildlife.

An image from a live video feed on the bp.com website early Wednesday.

"We're doing everything we can to bring it to closure, and actually we're executing this top kill job as efficiently and effectively as we can," BP Chief Operating Officer Doug Suttles said Wednesday night.

The top kill has worked above ground but has never before been tried 5,000 feet beneath the sea. Company officials peg its chance of success at 60 percent to 70 percent.

President Obama said "there's no guarantees" it will work. The president planned a trip to Louisiana for Friday.

"We're going to bring every resource necessary to put a stop to this thing," he said.

"The absence of any news is good news," said Coast Guard Adm. Thad Allen, who is overseeing the operation. He added: "It's a wait-and-see game here right now, so far nothing unfavorable."

A live video stream Wednesday showed pictures of the blowout preventer, as well as the oil gushing out. At other times, the feed showed mud spewing out, but BP said this was not cause for alarm.

Meanwhile, witness statements obtained by The Associated Press show senior managers complained BP was "taking shortcuts" the day of the explosion by replacing heavy drilling fluid with saltwater in the well that blew out.

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS

» At a hearing in New Orleans on Wednesday, Douglas Brown, the Deepwater Horizon rig's chief mechanic, testified about what he described as a "skirmish" between someone he called the "company man"—a BP official—and three other employees during a meeting the day of the explosion. Brown said he didn't pay particular attention to what they were discussing because it did not involve his engine room duties. He later said he did not know the BP official's name. "The driller outlined what would be taking place, but the company man stood up and said, 'We'll be having some changes to that,'" Brown testified. He said the three other workers initially disagreed but "the company man said 'This is how it's going to be.'"

» Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal and Plaquemines Parish President Billy Nungesser, both outspoken critics, led a boat tour Wednesday around the oil-fouled delta near the mouth of the Mississippi River. About 100 miles of Louisiana coastline have been hit by the oil, the Coast Guard said.

» President Obama said the "heartbreaking" oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico underscores the urgent need for alternative fuel sources to feed the U.S.' energy needs.

» Dramatic rate cuts are luring visitors to Gulf Coast resorts despite the oil spill, which threatens beaches and salt marshes from Texas to Florida. AP

Not even nostalgia is reliable anymore

Can we trust our childhood memories? Or to better and more eloquently phrase the question: Has Chuck E. Cheese always sucked?

I visited Mr. Cheese last week. Word of the place "where a kid can be a kid" had somehow reached my 4-year-old son, and because I felt bad that he spends all of his waking hours doing such unkid-like things as going to the playground, watching cartoons and getting everything he wants, I agreed it was finally time to take him there and let him have a childhood.

The truth is, I couldn't have been more excited myself. The prospect of playing Skee-Ball had me feeling giddy all day—though I tempered my enthusiasm with concern that my son and other 4-year-olds would make noise, bump into me midroll and otherwise disrespect the game.

It turns out it wasn't the kids I should have been worried about—it was Chuck E. Cheese himself. (I defy you to find a more dramatic sentence in this paper today.)

The place was missing a few things I remembered fondly from my youth. Like a puck for the air-hockey game. And basketballs in one of the Pop-a-Shots. And moles in the Whac-a-Mole game who still cared about their jobs.

"Hold on, what happened to all the wonderful animatronic productions? Is that it?" I asked the woman at the counter, motioning to the stage where Chuck and his lethargic band were situated next to a large-screen TV. The woman looked at me like I was crazy.

"You're crazy," my wife said.

"I'm crazy? I'm not the one who feels the need to assure people on my website that my pizza contains '100-percent real cheese.'"

"My word, would you stop?" my wife exclaimed. "Look at your son. He—the reason we are here—is having the time of his life."

And he was. At least until he found out his 200 Skee-Ball tickets earned him only a rubber frog.

But this column, contrary to the first 10 paragraphs and, er, the final two to follow, isn't about Chuck E. Cheese and how lousy it is. Lord knows I'll probably find myself there again next week.

Rather, to go back to the first sentence, it's about whether we can trust our childhood memories. A lot of things have gone down in quality over the years. Is that what happened with Chuck E. Cheese, or did it never have any quality to go down from?

Is nostalgia bound to disappoint, or are today's kids getting the short end of the stick? And which option is worse? Either way, years from now, if I have grandkids, I know one place I'm never taking them.

It turns out it wasn't the kids I should have been worried about—it was Chuck E. Cheese himself. (I defy you to find a more dramatic sentence in this paper today.)

NEW BOOZE

Pour out a little liquor by the lakefront. With the passage of a new ordinance, here are the lakefront spots where you could be able to sip as early as this summer, according to park district spokeswoman Jessica Maxey-Faulkner. Facilities will be built, where needed, to accommodate an ordinance requirement that vendors also sell food with the booze.

1. Osterman Beach House
West Hollywood Avenue and North Lake Shore Drive
2. Montrose Beach House
4400 N. Lake Shore Drive
3. Waveland Clock Tower
3700 N. Recreation Drive
4. Diversey Driving Range
141 W. Diversey Parkway
5. Diversey Grill
248 W. Diversey Parkway
6. Ohio Street Beach
400 N. Lake Shore Drive
7. DuSable Harbor
401 N. Lake Shore Drive
8. North Rose Garden at Buckingham Fountain
500 S. Lake Shore Drive
9. 31st Street Boat House
3100 South 31st Street
10. 63rd Street Beach House
63rd Street and Lake Shore Drive
11. South Shore Golf Course
7059 S. South Shore Drive
12. South Shore Cultural Center
7059 S. South Shore Drive
13. 87th Street Harbor
87th and the Lake
14. Calumet Beach House
9801 S. Avenue G

EXISTING SPOTS

The 14 new liquor licenses will allow upcoming facilities to join a dozen other park district-owned locations that also allow liquor, mainly for “special-use” events. Here’s a list of current lakefront liquor-friendly spots, according to the ordinance:

15. Berger Park 6205 N. Sheridan Road
16. Sydney R. Marovitz Golf Course
3600 N. Recreation Drive
17. Theater on the Lake 2401 N. Lake Shore Drive
18. Lincoln Park Zoo 2001 N. Clark St.
19. Lincoln Park (South Field House)
1800 N. Stockton Drive
20. North Ave. Beach (Castaways)

City approves 14 new liquor licenses, but officials say summer won’t be a booze cruise

By Kyra Kyles REDEYE

Your shot at having a shot by the lakefront is getting closer. In case you missed it, the City Council this month approved 14 new liquor licenses for the Chicago Park District to distribute, more than doubling the number of places allowed to sell alcohol along Lake Michigan.

As early as this summer, vendors could begin serving alcoholic beverages at popular sites such as Diversey Grill in Lincoln Park, DuSable Harbor near the 400 block of Lake Shore Drive, and the golf course at the South Shore Cultural Center.

While the park district hopes to move quickly to get restaurants up and running at the new locations, officials have said it’s possible only one new spot—South Shore Golf Course—will be serving alcohol by early summer, because there’s already a facility at that location, the Tribune reports.

Under the terms of the new ordinance, lakefront patrons would be able to enjoy beer, wine and mixed drinks at some existing and newly created facilities at select park district locations until 10 p.m. At Millennium Park and Northerly Island locations, beer and liquor sales would be allowed until midnight. Previously, the park district permitted liquor sales until 11 p.m. outside Millennium Park.

The new liquor licenses would complement park district “special use” locations that currently permit the serving of alcoholic beverages during special events, including Oak Street Beach, Garfield Park, the Jackson Park Golf Course clubhouse and the Daley Bicentennial Plaza in Grant Park, park district spokeswoman Jessica Maxey-Faulkner said.

But don’t expect the beach fronts to become booze fronts.

Park district officials said any vendor seeking a license must also offer food to avoid creating “a tavern, packaged goods or any sort of beer garden environment anywhere on its property,” according to a Tribune-obtained statement from Timothy King, the park district’s director of intergovernmental affairs.

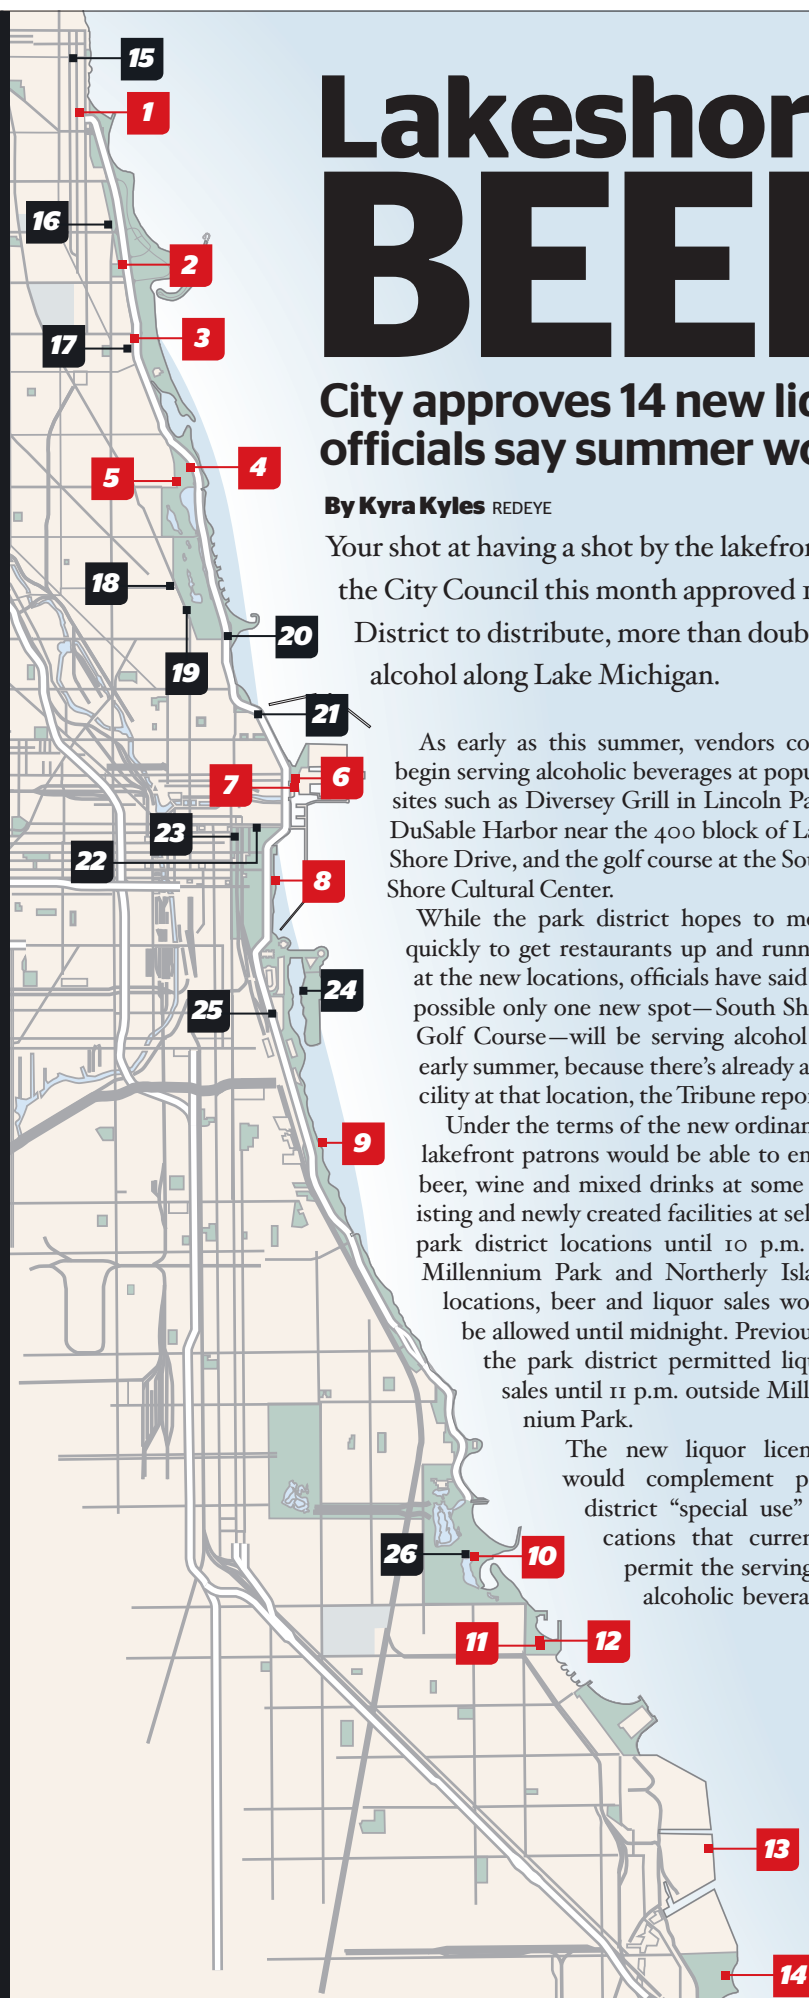

Potential vendors would be reviewed by the park district after a call-for-proposal process, according to Maxey-Faulkner. Other locations for the licenses include the 87th Street Harbor and the North Rose Garden at Buckingham Fountain in Grant Park.

The park district already has a dozen lakefront liquor licenses, including sites at Oak Street Beach, Lincoln Park Zoo and the south end of Grant Park, the Tribune reports.

The revenue brought in by leasing park district lakefront property would add to the city’s coffers and the new liquor licenses better position the park district to compete with businesses on private property, Maxey-Faulkner said.

“In the case of golf courses, for example, you will find that a glass of wine or beer is available at most golf courses and that will put us on par with our competitors,” Maxey-Faulkner said. “In the case of golf courses, certainly, and in case of an upscale restaurant, you will find the ability to get beer or wine with your meal.”

It's a long way to a liquor license

Getting a liquor license in Chicago is no simple task. I'm reminded of that every day as a reporter who covers the opening of new bars and clubs.

A liquor license, distributed through the city's department of business affairs and consumer protection, allows an establishment to serve beer, wine and spirits to the public. Snagging one requires more than just filling out an application and paying a fee ($4,440 for a two-year term, in the case of most licenses).

There's the submission of supporting paperwork for the business, from floor plans to proof of insurance to bank statements. And then fingerprinting and criminal background checks for anyone with 5 percent or more ownership in the business to ensure permit-holders are law-abiding. Liquor license applicants also need to give notice to all voters within 250 feet of the business, allowing 45 days for neighbors to voice their support or protest.

Where a business is located also may affect whether the owner can secure a license, according to Liquor Control Commissioner Gregory Steadman. Certain voting precincts (such as the 27th precinct of the 44th Ward in Lincoln Park or the 42nd precinct of the 32nd Ward in Roscoe Village) have been voted dry through a local option referendum. Aldermen can issue moratoriums on certain blocks within their wards to keep new liquor stores or bars from opening. And businesses can't sell liquor within 100 feet of a school, church, library or hospital. BYOB restaurants, on the other hand, don't need an additional license to permit customers to tote in their own booze.

Late-hour liquor licenses that allow establishments to serve till 4 a.m. or 5 a.m. are especially rare because they require owners to clear an extra hurdle: Fifty-one percent of voters living within 500 feet of the place must sign a petition in favor of booze being served till the early hours of the morning in their neighborhood.

Once a liquor license application is accepted by the department, the city has 60 days to approve or deny, Steadman says. When a new bar or restaurant hasn't opened because owners are still "waiting for their license," the delay could be caused by any number of things: backlash from neighbors, inspection failures or even an unpaid parking ticket—any trace of city debt prevents a license from being issued. If the commission denies a business a license and the owners decide to appeal, the court process can stretch for months or even years.

Long story short: Getting that golden ticket is no walk in the park. LMARNETT@TRIBUNE.COM

Bottleneck city

3 of most congested trucking corridors are in Chicago, report says

Chicago Tribune

Chicago has the worst truck-traffic congestion in the United States, according to a new study issued Wednesday.

The Federal Highway Administration released a roster of 100 locations for the most severe trucking bottlenecks, and three of the 10 most congested corridors are in Chicago, including the top two.

No. 1 on the list is the junction between the Eisenhower Expressway (Interstate 290) and the Kennedy and Dan Ryan Expressways (Interstate 90/94) in downtown known as the Circle Interchange.

The average speed in this highway corridor is only 30 mph, and it dips to an average of 23 mph during rush periods, according to the study, which the Federal Highway Administration conducted with the American Transportation Research Institute, a trucking industry group. The findings are based on 2009 data.

In the No. 2 spot nationally is the Kennedy Expressway junction with the Edens Expressway (Interstate 94) on the North Side, where the average speed during rush periods is also 23 mph, increasing to an average of 39 mph during off-peak hours, despite a 55 mph speed limit.

The Dan Ryan Expressway where it meets up with the Bishop Ford Freeway ranked No. 9 in the study. Traffic speeds averaged 47 mph overall, 38 mph during peak travel periods and 50 mph during non-rush hours, the study found.

The results certainly are no surprise to drivers in the Chicago area. But the research is intended to educate trucking companies so they can better plan their delivery routes and schedules to avoid the worst of the traffic crunch or at least mitigate the problem, officials said.

"Planning is key," said Nancy Singer, a spokeswoman at the Federal Highway Administration. "One of the frustrations of congestion is the not knowing—and it costs money to shippers."

But a Midwest trucking executive said the money spent on the study would have been better used to identify arterial roads where trucks get mired in traffic and add to gridlock.

80-year-old shoots, kills intruder

Chicago Tribune

As an 80-year-old Army veteran, his wife and great-grandson slept in their Humboldt Park home just before dawn Wednesday, an intruder shot out a window, police and family said. But the homeowner, who had a handgun of his own, fired a single shot, killing the intruder, a police source said.

"He missed; my daddy didn't," said the 80-year-old's son, Butch Gant, who lives upstairs in the two-flat in the 600 block of North Sawyer Avenue.

The victim's family said that if the man hadn't been armed, the frightening encounter could have ended in their deaths.

"He saved our lives," said the man's wife, 83, who had been asleep with her husband, whom police won't name, when the noise of shattered glass awakened the family.

Police let the Korean War veteran go without filing immediate charges because he appeared to act in self-defense, according to police sources.

The intruder was later identified by his family as Anthony Nelson, 29, who had been on parole since December following a three-year prison sentence for a drug conviction, according to county and state records.

Blago files for delay

Lawyers for former Gov. Rod Blagojevich are trying again to delay his public corruption trial, this time alleging that U.S. District Judge James Zagel has not properly handled jury selection. In a motion filed late Tuesday, the lawyers said Zagel has been dismissing members of a large jury pool without the lawyers getting to hear or understand why the prospective jurors cannot serve.

Metra ups oversight

Metra's board of directors Wednesday acted to strengthen their oversight over the agency, moving to hire an inspector general and an outside auditor, both posts intended to act as watchdogs over the agency. The board also began the search for a new executive director to replace Phil Pagano, who committed suicide May 7 after disclosure of financial irregularities on his part.

Toyota sign vote June 9

The Cubs have agreed to a four-year moratorium on additional advertising signs that would rise above the Wrigley Field bleachers to gain city approval of its proposed Toyota outfield sign. The City Council's Buildings Committee on Tuesday unanimously approved the Cubs' permit for the Toyota sign, which now moves to the City Council for a vote June 9.

Amtrak adding security

Some passengers boarding Amtrak trains at Union Station in Chicago will face random screening of their carry-on bags starting Thursday, officials said. The new security measure, which will involve Amtrak police swabbing carry-on items to detect explosives, is not in response to any new threat, Amtrak spokesman Marc Magliari said. It represents an expansion of precautions that have been implemented on other Amtrak corridors.

Hyatt workers briefly walk out

Henry Tamarin, president of Unite Here Local 1, stood on the steps of the Stetson's Chop House on Wednesday morning and told Hyatt Regency workers they would return to work for now, but to hold on to their picket signs just in case.

"We are in the midst of a struggle that we are not going to solve in a few hours this morning," Tamarin said through a megaphone.

More than 300 workers at the Hyatt Regency in downtown Chicago walked off the job earlier Wednesday in a spontaneous work stoppage, saying the hotel's management barred union representatives from entering the building for more than a week. Tamarin said hotel management has refused to deal with the union, and another union representative said the union's demands have not been met. More demonstrations are planned for the future and negotiations are continuing.

Guests received a letter under their doors Wednesday, informing them that the walk-out would affect some hotel amenities, including full-service housekeeping. In a letter to hotel guests, Hyatt Regency management wrote, "We are disappointed that the union, rather than continuing to negotiate during the worst economic crisis in a generation, has engaged in a work stoppage at our hotel."

Standoff ends in shooting

A man who barricaded himself in the second-floor apartment of an Englewood two-flat was shot by police Wednesday after a standoff of about five hours that started with U.S. Marshals and Chicago police investigating escalating threats against the man's former employer, police said.

The police Crisis Intervention Team and U.S. Marshals went to a home in the 6400 block of South Bishop Street about 9:30 a.m. to investigate "an escalating series of threats" related to the man's former employer, according to a police statement. It was not believed anyone was in the apartment with him, police said.

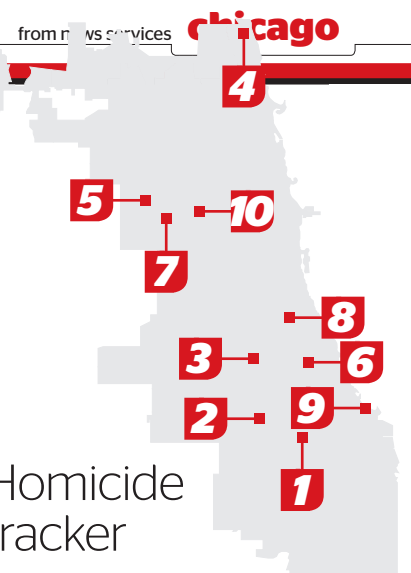

When police arrived, the man threatened police with a large knife, then barricaded himself in his bedroom, according to the statement. A Chicago SWAT team was called in, and after negotiations failed to bring the man out, police first used pepper spray and then a Taser on the man, who still was armed with the knife, police said.

The man then lunged at police with the knife and was shot, according to the statement. Officers fired shots and injured the man about 2:45 p.m., according to police News Affairs. He was taken to Stroger Hospital, according to police.

Police initially had said the man appeared to be mentally unstable.

Investigators from the Independent Police Review Authority were investigating, a spokesman for the agency said.

Multiple homicides were recorded in South Shore and Chatham in the past week, a RedEye analysis of police data found.

Three men between the ages of 24 and 30 were shot to death Tuesday in the 7600 block of South Coles Avenue in South Shore, according to information from the Cook County Medical Examiner's Office. It was the second triple homicide case this month.

Meanwhile in Chatham, a 30-year-old Chicago police officer was shot to death last week in the 8400 block of South King Drive, police said. A 20-year-old man was shot there in the same incident, police said.

Citywide, there were also gunshot deaths in Auburn Gresham, Englewood, Grand Boulevard, Humboldt Park and Washington Park in the last week. Fatal stabbings occurred Sunday in Austin and Monday in West Garfield Park. In Rogers Park, a 41-year-old man was found beaten to death last week.

Interracial marriage growth loses steam

4 WASHINGTON Melting pot or racial divide? The growth of interracial marriages is slowing among U.S.-born Hispanics and Asians. Still, blacks are substantially more likely than before to marry whites.

The number of interracial marriages in the U.S. has risen 20 percent since 2000 to about 4.5 million, according to the latest census figures. While still growing, that number is a marked drop-off from the 65 percent increase between 1990 and 2000.

About 8 percent of U.S. marriages are mixed race, up from 7 percent in 2000.

The latest trend belies notions of the U.S. as a post-racial, assimilated society. Demographers cite a steady flow of recent immigration that has given Hispanics and Asians more ethnically-similar partners to choose while creating some social distance from whites due to cultural differences and foreign language.

White wariness toward a rapidly growing U.S. minority population also may be contributing to racial divisions, experts said.

BY THE NUMBERS

Census numbers showed Hawaii had the country's highest share of mixed marriages, at about 32 percent. It was followed by Alaska, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Nevada, which ranged from 15 percent to 19 percent. The bottom five states were Pennsylvania, Maine, Kentucky, Mississippi and West Virginia, each between 3 percent to 4 percent.

"Racial boundaries are not going to disappear anytime soon," said Daniel Lichter, a professor of sociology and public policy at Cornell University. He noted the increase in anti-immigrant sentiment in the U.S. after the Sept. 11, 2001, terror attacks as well as current tensions in Arizona due to its new immigration law.

"With a white backlash toward immigrant groups, some immigrants are more likely to turn inward to each other for support," Lichter said.

The new Danicas?

Trio of women join Patrick in the Indianapolis 500 lineup

RedEye

Has Danica Patrick worn out her welcome? More so than usual, that is?

If the booing the 28-year-old Patrick received after qualifying for the Indianapolis 500 last weekend is any indication, she has. The Roscoe, Ill., native qualified a career-worst 23rd at Indy, then blamed her team for her disappointing effort.

"It's not my fault," she said. "The car is not good."

If race fans, or casual observers, need a new female driver to root for, there are three others in the field. That makes it a record four women in the 33-car lineup. Here are the women not named Danica.

Philadelphia: The Second-Rate City

In the days leading up to the Stanley Cup finals, we'll be flooded with comparisons between the Blackhawks and the Philadelphia Flyers. I'm going to leave that up to the pros and focus instead on the matchup that really matters: Which is the better city? After extensive research, I came to a completely unbiased conclusion. I give you the Top Ten Reasons Why Chicago is Better than Philadelphia.

10 Our women

I'd hate to be a Playboy talent scout in Philly. It'd be like dropping off a fisherman in the Sahara desert.

9 Our signature dish

Choosing a Philly cheesesteak over Chicago deep-dish would be like Brat Pitt leaving Angelina Jolie for Betty White.

8 Our celebs

There's no way we'll forgive them for Joey Lawrence.

7 Our location

I'd wager more people know Heidi Montag's new breast size than where Philadelphia is on a map.

6 Our statue

Grown men getting teary-eyed over a statue of Sylvester Stallone is creepy, but completely acceptable if you replaced it with Michael Jordan.

5 Our appeal

Outside of a broken bell and a few other attractions, visiting Philly ranks right up there with a get-away in Detroit.

4 Our logo

The Hawks logo is iconic. I'd argue the Philadelphia cream cheese label means more to Philly than the Flyers logo.

3 Our respect

These fans once threw snowballs at Santa during an Eagles game. Talk about kicking karma in the junk.

2 Our fans

While Philly fathers teach their sons how to fire batteries from the upper deck, Chicagoans continue to worship sports the right way.

1 Our history

As one of the Original Six, the Hawks' place in history is secure.

1 What's your Blackhawks excitement level at?	It peaked when I told people "Greenfield" is pronounced "Buff-lin."	In my pants at the cleaners, but they'll be back by game time.	Four. As in four wins until the Hawks hoist the Stanley Cup!	Freeze Factor 10.	As excited as "The Biggest Loser" winner at a buffet after the cameras turn off.
2 Who's the Flyers villain we'll all hate this weekend?	Don't know, but to get things started I've been crank-calling the Schaumburg Flyers.	That guy who scored that goal. That guy is the worst.	Scott Hartnell. That hair is something even a mother couldn't love.	Tick-tock Broadstreet Bully Ian Laperriere.	Simon Gagne is as good at deking as the Asian carp.
3 What would you ask the Blackhawks during Stanley Cup finals media day Thursday?	"Andrew and Colin, why are your beards so feminine and girly compared to mine?" (Runs away.)	"Are you more of a Carrie, Miranda, Charlotte or Samantha?"	"Who would win in a fight? Kaner's mullet or Keith's teeth?"	"What beverage would you drink from Lord Stanley's cup?"	Which NBA players are they going to dress up like this Halloween?
4 How much more could we hear about Duncan Keith's teeth?	I'm waiting for the "Duncan Keith's teeth turns up on eBay" story. I'll start the bidding at two bits.	Lots! I'm dying to know the teeth's shape and what toothpaste he uses.	Were they incisors or canines? Any cavities? Does he floss?	How much did tooth fairy leave?	I heard "Tooth" the off-Broadway musical already is in rehearsal at the Cadillac Palace Theatre.
5 Why would Phil Jackson want to come back to coach the Bulls?	Because he will only coach an NBA team with superstars. Most. Overrated. Coach. Ever.	Definitely due to his loyalty for my eighth grade Deerfield Bulls team. Yep, I still have the shorts.	Um ... I bet he really misses the seasons here. Yeah, L.A. is, uh, too hot.	Cash, LeBron and to meet Lee DeWyze.	He likes dating the daughters of team owners named Jerry.

Hawks swamped with requests for finals tix. Roberto Luongo calling?

Patrick Sharp has been with the Hawks long enough to remember some sparsely attended games. BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE

Sharper image

Patrick Sharp relishes Blackhawks renaissance

On Dec. 7, 2005, history documents more than 15,000 people bought tickets for a Blackhawks game. Attendance history may be as inflated as a parade balloon. This also was Patrick Sharp's first night with the club, and as he fruitlessly scanned thousands of seats in search of a face, he fairly wondered exactly what he had gotten into.

Two days earlier, the first-place Flyers traded him to a Hawks team that would win 26 games all season. Sharp figured maybe 9,000 people actually witnessed his debut. So began a time when people would ask him what he did for a living, and he would say he played hockey in Chicago.

Often this was followed by: "For who?"

"Times definitely have changed," Sharp said Wednesday. "A little bit different than it is now, for sure."

Few Hawks will feel an acute satisfaction from this Stanley Cup finals run like Sharp. He was dispatched in that winter of discontent to a hollowed-out carcass of a franchise and didn't dare delude himself with hope of an expeditious turnaround.

Then precisely that occurred. He is the third-leading scorer and alternate captain for an explosively popular team, exchanging anonymity for congratulatory handshakes from neighbors, facing the team that traded him for a trophy he wondered if he ever would get a chance to hoist.

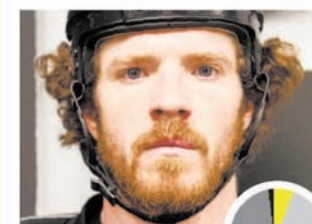

"I never would have expected it to turn around so quickly," Sharp said. "It means a lot to everybody, but especially [Duncan Keith, Brent Seabrook] and myself who have been here through some pretty tough years."

"A lot of hard work from a lot of people and a huge turnaround. I challenge anyone to find a better place to play in the league right now than Chicago."

Plot your summer dining and drinking adventures

This weekend marks the unofficial start of summer and—lucky us!—it looks like we'll have sunny weather to match. To guide your adventures in outdoor dining and drinking, we present our own Chicago summer version of the pastime adored by serious VFW Hall gamers and California Clipper regulars alike.

Here's how to play: First, save this page (or print a copy at chicago.metromix.com/alfresco). Then take photos of yourself completing the tasks detailed below. Once you've collected five in a row, e-mail your winning series of photos to mmxchi@gmail.com with "Patio Bingo" in the subject line for a chance to be featured on metromix.com and here in RedEye.

What's with the bow?

I'm a girly-girl, and I love bows.

Do you shop at a special bow store?

Actually, the blouse is Ralph Lauren.

What's your most indulgent fashion purchase?

An Emilio Pucci coat. It's hot pink, brown, orange and green. It cost close to $3,000. I call it a car.

Jon Fab 22, fashion designer

What took longer, your outfit or your hair?

My outfit. Well, my hair.

What's your best fashion advice?

Be yourself. Be creative. Have your own style. And don't care about what anybody else says.

What's a fashion don't?

Plaid. Anything plaid.

What should a guy never wear?

Ed Hardy T-shirts.

Fallon Sowers 27, bartender/student

What kind of animal print are you wearing?

I would say it's a leopard. Perhaps a cheetah.

What's the most annoying thing a person can do to a bartender?

Asking me the price of every single drink that we have. It's really irritating.

What's a decent tip on each drink?

The average on each drink would probably be a dollar. With the economy being the way that it is, you can't really expect much more.

What about Kabob?

By M. Kathleen Pratt

As anyone who's ever had to watch their food budget knows, Middle Eastern fare is usually a good bet. It's unfailingly cheap, and it's never too hard to find in Chicago. Lately, it seems new falafel joints have been opening weekly.

With such a glut of hummus- and pita-slingers around town, we almost passed up newcomer Ameer Kabob, which opened in Noble Square in February with a garish sign and stripped-down dining room that didn't seem very welcoming. But that's the other thing about falafel and shawarma joints: The best ones often come with the least frills.

Once you're inside the little storefront, which is set up for efficient carryout and delivery service with a large rear counter that's open to the kitchen behind, the aromas from the grill hit you and you know you're on to something good.

Kabobs really are the specialty here, particularly the juicy kafta kabob, ground beef seasoned with onions, parsley, cumin, paprika, black pepper and other spices. It's available, like all of the meats, in a Lebanese wrap ($4.99) or as an entree ($7.99), served two-to-an-order with a few grilled veggies, pita and a generous portion of rice. For just a buck more, you can get a combo feast, which includes a shish kabob, a chicken kabob and a kafta kabob with all of the trimmings. If you can make it there between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. on a weekday, the deal gets even better—it's just $6.99.

DAN PETERSON PHOTOS FOR METROMIX

Vegetarians can feast on falafel sandwiches ($3.99), falafel plates ($7.99, served with baba ghanoush) or veg plates ($7.99) stacked with hummus, tabouleh, falafel, dolma and baba ghanoush. Those last two are worth ordering for the baba ghanoush alone. It's heavier on tahini than some versions, which smooths out the texture without overpowering the smoky eggplant. A small side ($2.25), served with soft pita from Irving Park's Sanabel Bakery, feeds two or more comfortably as an appetizer.

Stone Temple Pilots

Self-titled, (Atlantic Records)

I know, I know. Who cares about Stone Temple
Pilots, right? "So '90s."

Uh, let's not be so condescending to the past. While many acts fail to maintain relevance over a couple of decades, STP makes a confident, rockin' return with this self-titled disc, the band's first album of new material since 2001's "Shangri-La Dee Da." Don't think about singer Scott Weiland's time in Velvet Revolver or his well-documented substance abuse issues. When hearing the tight, poppy grooves of "Between the Lines" and "Cinnamon," you may realize you missed these guys more than you thought. And guitarist Dean DeLeo's furious, muscular attack on "Hazy Daze"? Hell yes. Rock rarely snarls like this anymore, and STP can still combine old-fashioned, balls-out attitude with actual songs that deserve to kick around in your head and make you wish you were alone to break out the air guitar without feeling self-conscious. The band occasionally misfires, like the forgettable "Peacoat" and the silly empowerment song "Dare if You Dare." Mostly "Stone Temple Pilots" feels focused and limber, with an interest in transparency as Weiland sings, "You're telling my story, but you don't know my name," in "Hickory Dichotomy." This is a solid pop-rock record packed with chemistry and swagger that gets in and out of 12 songs in just over 40 minutes. Welcome back, guys. —MATT PAIS

Santos blazes solo trail

By Kent Green

FOR REDEYE

Matthew Santos is ready to step into his own spotlight.

The Minneapolis native moved to Chicago in 2001 to study music at Columbia College, but he received a crash course in the music industry after singing the hook on local rapper Lupe Fiasco's hit "Superstar." Santos was swept into a worldwide tour and TV appearances.

He now is working to establish himself apart from his work with Fiasco, with his new album, "This Burning Ship of Fools," and his label, Love Sick Fool Records. Santos spoke with RedEye last fall about Fiasco and his current projects.

What was it like going from presumably small success to massive festivals touring with Lupe?

It was at first a bit jarring. I had to set myself aside and say, "All right, well how do I accentuate the show and make it that much better?" So I had to step into a sort of, facade of the "Superstar" part. I had the Mohawk going, wearing the big glasses.

When: 8 p.m. Friday

Where: Double Door,

1572 N. Milwaukee

Tickets: $12-$24 at doubledoor.com or

877-435-9849

What can you take from that to performing now?

I guess I've stepped into a sense of being onstage and using that great energy of thousands of viewers to really escalate the performance. I feel more comfortable. I'm not nervous anymore.

Do you have any aspirations in taking your new label beyond yourself, or would it only be a vehicle to manage your own work?

Best-case scenario, the album will sell 100,000 copies or we'll sell 100,000 songs, and we'll have enough money to only support ourselves, but eventually we can sign other artists. And that's ultimately what I aspire to do, is find other artists who have similar visions or passions and through my success—or my hopeful success—take them on tour with me. Then they have a built-in audience that they can release their stuff to as well.

When you get a big boost from someone, is that difficult to get out from under?

I don't know if people see it that way or not. People tend to just recognize the talent for what it is and honor that. So I rarely hear, "Oh, he's just the hook guy from Lupe Fiasco."

And, it's also maybe introduced you to new fans?

Right, exactly. So there's the residual traffic I've gotten through Lupe Fiasco's fan base, and alongside of that, there's this acoustic fan base who just loves the stripped-down, raw, acoustic music. ... That's what so beautiful about this whole situation. Beautiful music has the power to reach anyone who has the ears to hear it.

Windy City wearable

Gibson flower print top, $58, Nordstrom

Daman found style inspiration in the tulips on Michigan Avenue. Pink and purple are not an obviously chic pair, so use color schemes found in nature to guide how you combine colors.

Drawstring bar crossbody purse, $39.99, nine west.com

Major trend? Petite crossbody purses, Daman says. Especially styles that go beyond studs and mix embellishments such as this one.

This sandal is Allard's fresh take on the stud trend. The "mini-bear" embellishment and the shoe's modern structure remind him of the futuristic designs in Chicago's cityscape. Dalejr sandal, $89, ninewest.com

J Brand Houlihan skinny stretch cotton cargo pants, $231, Nordstrom

Don't let the word "skinny" scare you. Both Allard and Daman agree that baggy pants sometimes can make legs appear wider. Pants with slimmer legs elongate and frame your natural silhouette.

Wrap a belt around your wrist to make it a statement bracelet, Allard suggests. Metallic skinny belt, $38, ninewest.com

If The CW's "Gossip Girl" were set in Chicago, what would Blair and Serena wear while plotting revenge and window shopping on Oak Street?

That's the question I asked "Gossip Girl" costume designer Eric Daman and Nine West creative director Fred Allard when they visited the Windy City this spring.

Of course, "Gossip Girl" fans tune in for the weekly drama. But the series also has become this generation's "Sex and the City" when it comes to fashion trendspotting via TV.

Daman, Allard and I put our fashion-forward heads together and created a pair of signature Chicago ensembles that the "Gossip Girl" gals would wear if they traded Manhattan's Upper East Side for the Gold Coast. Daman created the show's signature style, and Allard is a Lady Gaga-loving, fashion design dynamo. During the two days I spent with him, Daman delighted every woman he met with an unmatched desire to help her look her best.

With pieces from a Nine West exclusive collection for Nordstrom, the duo took street style to a whole new level—making fashion statements out of Chicago sights from the Michigan Avenue tulips to Anish Kapoor's "Cloud Gate" in Millennium Park.

Next time you need fashion inspiration, take it from Daman and Allard: Turn off the TV and go for a walk outside—at least until Season 4 of "Gossip Girl" starts in the fall.

"Never say no until you try it on," Allard said. "Feel excited, inspired and proud of what you wear"

Here's another take on how color combinations from nature can serve as guides when styling clothes from your closet. "Spring and summer are about having fun with color in your wardrobe," Daman said.

Maggy London jacquard shift dress, $128, Nordstrom

In addition to mixing colors, try varying textures too, Daman and Allard said. The subtle touches of snakeskin, patent leather and the embellished neckline on the dress shown above make the outfit exciting. Think of it as the Chicago skyline: the individual architectural contrasts create synergy in the big picture.

Neon skinny belt, $28, ninewest.com

Barbie zip around clutch, $39.99, nine west.com

The stacked wood heel, snakeskin print and Avatar-like blue shade of this pair of shoes are right on trend, Daman said. The bright shade of blue reminded Daman and Allard of Lake Michigan in the summer. Diamante sandal, $89.95, Nordstrom exclusive from NineWest

TRACK-OFF

Kyles Files picked two winners in this week's track-off contest. Check them out at redeyechicago.com/kylesfiles. Vote in new bouts every Monday.

KYRA KYLES, REDEYE

RAP'Meeting in the Middle'

J. Hill

J. Hill overwhelmed rap competitor J. Griggs. Hill's romantic "Meeting in the Middle," featuring songstress Krissma, comes across polished, sensual and smoothed out—an obvious addition to any pillow-talk playlist.

Jackpot Donnie

ROCK'New Mode'

Jackpot Donnie

Jackpot Donnie hit the numbers in a nail-biting battle against Perseus Noble. On "New Mode," Jackpot offers throaty, imploring vocals, a sumptuous ska undertone and a chorus that captivates listeners.

Sign up at chicagohash.com

Runners looking for a change of pace should check out the Chicago Hash House Harriers, "a drinking club with a running problem." The harriers regularly host fun runs, but these aren't your ordinary races. Runners follow "hares" and look for clues to the trail, which typically leads to beer. There's a Memorial Day Hash on Sunday starting at O'Lanagan's, 2335 W. Montrose Ave.

BEAUTYANEW Clinical Luminosity Pro Brightening Serum

$54 at avon.com or an Avon representative

Tired of your eyes looking tired? Are you seeing spots? Well, Avon's Luminosity serum offers smoothing and lightening of the eye area and also helps even out all-over skin tone, fading even those dark spots. Slather a bit on before bedtime and you might notice you look more bright-eyed come morning. EMILY ROSENBAUM MAKKA, REDEYE

On the town

Our city is awash in celebrities these days. Let's take a look at which TV and movie stars were here this week, what they were doing and which creative folks are on tap for a visit:

Chris Colfer and Heather Morris at the Rosemont Theater
GETTY IMAGES

Of course they sang

"Glee" cast members liked their dinner at Hub 51 on Tuesday so much, six of them tweeted about it, including Harry Shum Jr., who needed several exclamation points to describe the experience. "Thank you @hub51 for the amazing dinner!!!!" he tweeted. "We had a great time and the food was BOMB!!!" Co-stars Cory Monteith, Amber Riley, Naya Rivera, Mark Salling, Chris Colfer, Heather Morris and Dijon Talton also were there. The cast ate chicken nachos, sushi, ceviche and green chile cheeseburgers and sang happy birthday to Colfer (he turns 20 on Thursday) after the staff at the West Hubbard restaurant brought out carrot cake with sparklers. The party then moved downstairs to Sub 51. "Having a 'birthday week' means your friends whore you out at every chance for free cake," Colfer tweeted. "Thanks guys for a great night!" The cast was in town for the "Glee" concert tour.

Thai one on

Jaden Smith and Jackie Chan, the stars of "The Karate Kid" reboot, were on hand Wednesday night for the Chicago premiere, but someone stole a bit of their thunder. Jaden's dad, Will Smith, bounded down the red carpet at the AMC River East, sending fans into a tizzy. Amid the hubbub, Chan was asked about a line in the movie in which Jaden's character's mom tells him that eating while standing up gives you gas. Chicagoans eat their hot dogs and Italian beef upright all the time, so what would Chan be eating during his stay in Chicago, and was he concerned about getting gas? Chan laughed. "No, no! I just ate some Thai food!"

They write AND speak!

Andy Richter and Conan O'Brien's writers will take the spotlight in a TBS special to be taped during a comedy festival in Chicago next month. TBS said Wednesday that the one-hour special, with the working title "Team Coco presents Conan's Writers Live," is scheduled to air June 27. The show will be taped June 17 at the Bank of America Theatre, 18 W. Monroe St. Richter will host. The show is part of the Just for Laughs festival, which runs June 15-19. Tickets for the "Team Coco" show go on sale Friday. AP

Yes, LEE CAN

Chicago has a champ—and it isn't the Blackhawks. Mt. Prospect native Lee DeWyze is the new "American Idol." "Oh my God," the former paint store worker said Wednesday. "It's just amazing. Thank you guys so much for everything. ... I can't believe it. ... Crystal I love you." Crystal, of course, is former Chicago resident Crystal Bowersox, the single mom nicknamed "Mama Sox" who, with DeWyze, auditioned Aug. 31 in Chicago. After Tuesday's show, Bowersox seemed to be the frontrunner. But Team DeWyze had a different plan. It was an exciting end for the boring slog that was the ninth season of "American Idol," which seemed to be more about the judges than the dull crop of contestants. Wednesday was no different. "Idol" spent a good part of the two-hour finale paying tribute to judge Simon Cowell, who is leaving the show to concentrate on a new Fox reality show. It seemed as though "Idol" tapped into Cowell's iPod playlist for its guest performances. Oldies Joe Cocker, Chicago, Bret Michaels, Alice Cooper, Michael McDonald, the Bee Gees, Hall & Oates—along with Janet Jackson, Christina Aguilera and Alanis Morissette—sang with this year's contestants.

HOT DATE

That's when Sandra Bullock will make her first awards-show appearance since the Jesse James scandal broke. The star will be the first woman to receive the MTV Movie Awards' Generation Award, the channel reports.

Ellen's star search

Ellen DeGeneres would like to be a kingmaker. The talk-show host and "American Idol" judge has started her own record label, inspired by 12-year-old phenom Greyson Chance, the YouTube sensation. "Greyson ... inspired me to start a record label called eleveneleven. He is my first artist, and we are making a record together," DeGeneres tells people.com.

As if we weren't 'Lost' enough

It turns out the scenes of plane wreckage at the end of "Lost" had no special meaning. ABC added the images, which included shots of Oceanic 815 on a deserted beach, as "a visual aid to allow the viewer to decompress before heading into the news," an ABC rep told the L.A. Times. Some fans thought the end-credits images meant no one survived the flight and everything during the past six years didn't happen.

Rihanna

Identity theft

Rihanna is in training. Rock star training. In her new video, "Rockstar 101," the "Umbrella" songstress fronts a band that includes Blink-182 drummer Travis Barker and goes through myriad costume changes, including blackface and chains. Rihanna even dresses as Slash, who performs on the track. "The video is way better with her being me than with me being me," the guitarist told mtv.com.

Artists boycott Arizona

Rage Against the Machine frontman Zack de la Rocha is calling on artists to boycott Arizona because of its tough new immigration law. Sonic Youth, Conor Oberst, Cypress Hill, Kanye West, Tenacious D, Massive Attack, and Calle 13 have joined the boycott known as The Sound Strike.
